

ELITE PATIENT ADVOCATE

INFORMED CHOICES

IMPROVED OUTCOMES

Healthcare Navigation: Is it really necessary?

Yes! It is often necessary and frequently vital in bringing about the best possible results when healthcare crisis strikes. All too frequently, when faced with traumatic events or emergent medical needs, the patient as well as their caregiver find themselves in uncharted and turbulent waters. Often, the decisions needing to be made quickly and without compassionate guidance and sufficient information, are the most critical ones. Making these decisions without benefit of perspective gained through knowledge and experience is frightening, distressing and frequently overwhelming. It is even difficult to sort out which decisions need to be made first. That's where an independent patient advocate brings calm in the storm. Eliminating unnecessary noise and confusion, harnessing focus and critical thinking, your advocate will ascertain your position and guide you through your healthcare maze.

A Testimonial

This is Cody - Paul's cardiac rehab buddy. Still enjoying each other today!

As a wife, I have had firsthand experience with the enormous challenges, when faced with a medical emergency and complex health issues for a spouse. The situation is overwhelming—emotionally, physically, and mentally.

...We were blessed to have Anna with us each step of the way. While we had the good fortune to be in a high-quality, healthcare setting, most of the information that the physicians provided was not comprehensible to us, and since many decisions had to be made quickly, Anna's ability to explain options, put issues into perspective, and help prioritize decision-making was invaluable. Her substantial knowledge of the latest information on clinical experience and treatment options was extremely helpful and guided us through many difficult and complex decisions.... -Lynn P.
